Did you know ?

The concept of the Luxembourg Gardens originated with Queen Marie de Médicis in 1612. Wanting to escape the Louvre heavy atmosphere, she dreamt of a new palace outside the city that would boast huge French gardens. Because the purchase of the desired land took much longer than expected, it was years after she died that the gardens were finally expanded. The completed gardens used to spread up to the Observatoire to the North, hosting a botanical garden. Unfortunately, all the flowers had perished when Baron Haussmann opened the boulevard Saint-Michel in the late XIXth century, giving the nicknamed Luco its definite size.
